HE JOURNAL'S Want Ad. page

22 2.3

THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES

= By A. Conan Doyle=

Author of "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," "The Hound of the Baskervilles," "The Sign of the Four," Etc. ILLUSTRATED BY F. D. STEELE.

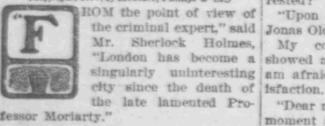

200 200 200

The Adventure of the Norwood Builder

No. 2 of the Series

(Copyright, 1905, by McClure, Phillips & Co.)

"I can hardly think that you would ing to my friend Dr. Watson that senfind many decent citizens to agree with sational cases had disappeared out of "The community is certainly the gain- knee. advantages which London then pos- from London Bridge station, and I am self done so much to produce.

had been back for some months, and backward and forward in his chair. I at his request had sold my practice I looked with interest upon this man rest?" and returned to share the old quarters who was accused of being the perpein Baker street. A young doctor nam-trator of a crime of violence. He was heath, with my parents, Mr. Holmes, ed Verner had purchased my small flaxen haired and handsome, in a wash-Kensington practice and given with ed out negative fashion, with frightenastonishingly little demur the highest ed bine eyes and a clean shaven face, stayed at a hotel in Norwood and price that I ventured to ask-an inci- with a weak, sensitive mouth. His age dent which only explained itself some may have been about twenty-seven, his time later when I found that Verner dress and bearing that of a gentleman, in the train, when I read what you not be easy until the whole thing was found the money. Our months of partnership had not profession, been so uneventful as he had stated, "We must use what time we have," so the shocking affair of the Dutch tion?" ever, to anything in the shape of public applause, and he bound me in the most explained, has only now been removed. and was unfolding his morning paper of that name. He has had the reputation of being a man of eccentric habits, sein a leisurely fashion when our attention was arrested by a tremendous has practically withdrawn from the busiby a hellow drumming sound, as if some one were beating on the outer house, and last night, about 12 o'clock, door with his fist. As it opened there an alarm was given that one of the stacks came a tumultuous rush into the hall, was on fire. The engines were soon upon an instant later a wild eyed and fran- rest the conflagration until the stack had tic young man, pale, disheveled and been entirely consumed. Up to this point under our gaze of inquiry he became, was expressed at the absence of the masconscious that some apology was need- ter of the establishment from the scene ed for this unceremonious entry.

"I'm sorry, Mr, Holmes," he cried. "You mustn't blame me. I am nearly John Hector McFarlane."

He made the announcement as if the

"Have a cigarette, Mr. McFarlane," am sure that with your symptoms my days. Now, if you feel a little more composed I should be glad if you would tional developments will follow. sit down in that chair and tell us very slowly and quietly who you are and about you."

in addition I am the most unfortunate man at this moment in London. For heaven's sake, don't abandon me, Mr. Holmes! If they come to arrest me before I have finished my story make them give me time so that I may tell you the whole truth. I could go to jail happy if I knew that you were working for me outside."

"Arrest you!" said Holmes. "This is really most grati-most interesting. On what charge do you expect to be ar-

ROM the point of view of "Upon the charge of murdering Mr. the criminal expert," said Jonas Oldacre of Lower Norwood," Mr. Sherlock Holmes, My companion's expressive face "London has become a showed a sympathy which was not, I singularly uninteresting am afraid, entirely unmixed with satthe late lamented Pro- "Dear me," said he, "it was only this moment at breakfast that I was say-

our papers." "Well, well, I must not be selfish," Our visitor stretched forward a quivsaid he, with a smile as he pushed back ering hand and picked up the Daily his chair from the breakfast table. Telegraph, which still lay upon Holmes' er and no one the loser save the poor | "If you had looked at it, sir, you out of work specialist, whose occupa- would have seen at a glance what the tion has gone. With that man in the errand is on which I have come to field one's morning paper presented in- you this morning. I feel as if my finite possibilities. Often it was only name and my misfortune must be in the smallest trace, Watson, the faint- every man's month." He turned it Copyright by Collier's Weekly. est indication, and yet it was enough over to expose the central page. "Here to tell me that the great malignant it is, and with your permission I will brain was there, as the gentlest tre- read it to you. Listen to this, Mr. mors of the edges of the web remind Holmes. The headlines are: 'Mysterious one of the foul spider which lurks in the Affair at Lower Norwood. Disappearheld the clew all could be worked to the Criminal.' That is the clew into one connected whole. To the sci- which they are already following. Mr. tomed energy and sagacity. entific student of the higher criminal Holmes, and I know that it leads inworld no capital in Europe offered the fallibly to me. I have been followed sessed. But now"- He shrugged his sure that they are only waiting for the shoulders in humorous deprecation of warrant to arrest me. It will break the state of things which he had him- my mother's heart-it will break her At the time of which I speak, Holmes agony of apprehension and swayed that it was my friend who had really overcoat protruded the bundle of indorsed papers which proclaimed his papers of ex-President Murillo, and al- and to read the paragraph in ques- doubt- Great heaven! What is that?"

cost us both our lives. His cold and which our client had quoted I read the A moment later our old friend Lestrade following suggestive narrative:

stringent terms to say no further word which points, it is feared, to a serious incident occurred at Lower Norwood two uniformed policemen outside. of himself, his methods or his suc- crime. Mr. Jonas Oldacre is a well known cesses-a prohibition which, as I have resident of that suburb, where he has car-Med on his business as a builder for many years. Mr. Oldacre is a bachelor, fifty-Mr. Sherlock Holmes was leaning back two years of age, and lives in Deep Dena In his chair after his whimsical protest. House at the Sydenham end of the road ring at the bell, followed immediately less in which he is said to have amassed considerable wealth. A small timber yard great fury, and it was impossible to arpalpitating, burst into the room. He the incident bore the appearance of an boked from one to the other of us, and ordinary accident, but fresh indications seem to point to serious crime. Surprise of the fire, and an inquiry followed, which showed that he had disappeared from the house. An examination of his room rewealed that the bed had not been slept in, mad. Mr. Holmes, I am the unhappy that a safe which stood in it was open, name alone would explain both his slight traces of blood being found within visit and its manner, but I could see the room, and an oaken walking stick, by my companion's unresponsive face which also showed stains of blood upon pear in evidence against him." that it meant no more to him than to the handle. It is known that Mr. Jonas bedroom upon that night, and the stick found has been identified as the property said he, pushing his case across. "I of this person, who is a young London solicitor named John Hector McFarlane, give you half an hour," said he. junior partner of Graham & McFarfriend Dr. Watson here would pre- lane of 4% Gresham bulldings, E. C. The scribe a sedative. The weather has police believe that they have evidence in been so very warm these last few their possession which supplies a very Oldacre. His name was familiar to me, Holmes. together it cannot be doubted that sensa-

what it is that you want. You men- of Jonas Oldacre. It is at least certain tioned your name as if I should recog- that a warrant has been issued. There nize it, but I assure you that beyond have been further and sinister develop- more astonished when he told me the my boy, I shall see a good deal of you ments in the investigation at Norwood. object of his visit. He had in his hand now, I hope, and I will keep your stick the obvious facts that you are a bachBesides the signs of a struggle in the several sheets of a notebook, covered until you come back to claim it.' I left asthmatic I know nothing whatever now known that the French windows with scribbled writing-here they are him there, the safe open and the papers clor, a solicitor, a Freemason and an room of the unfortunate builder it is of his bedroom (which is on the ground and he laid them on my table Familiar as I was with my friend's were marks as if some bulky object you, Mr. McFarlane, to cast it into to Blackheath, so I spent the night at methods, it was not difficult for me to had been dragged across to the wood pile, follow his deductions and to observe and finally it is asserted that charred re- proper legal shape. I will sit here the Anerley Arms, and I knew nothing the untidiness of attire, the sheaf of legal papers, the watch charm and the breathing which had prompted them. The police theory is that a most sensational crime has been committed, that the victim was clubbed imagine my astonishment when I found to so."

mains have been found among the charcon while you do so."

"I set myself to copy it, and you can imagine my astonishment when I found to so."

"Anything more that a most sensational crime has been committed, that the victim was clubbed to so." Our client, however, stared in amaze- to death in his own bedroom, his papers that, with some reservations, he had to ask, Mr. Holmes?" said Lestrade,

OUR UNFORTUNATE CLIENT ROSE, WITH A GHASTLY FACE.

Sherlock Holmes listened, with closed eyes and finger tips together, to this remarkable account.

"The case has certainly some points of interest," said he in his languid fashion. "May I ask, in the first place, heart!" He wrung his hands in an Mr. McFarlane, how it is that you are still at liberty, since there appears to be enough evidence to justify your ar-

"I live at Torrington Lodge, Blackbut last night, having to do business came to my business from there. I steamship Friesland, which so nearly Underneath the vigorous headlines instantly by heavy steps upon the stair. faithfully.

"Mr. John Hector McFarlane?" said

once more like one who is crushed.

can make no difference to you, and the him"rapid feet clattered up the stair and the spot, but the dry wood burned with count of this very interesting affair opened the door?" which might aid us in clearing it up."

> clearing it up," said Lestrade grimly. "None the less, with your permis- mentioned your name." sion, I should be much interested to

"Well, Mr. Holmes, it is difficult for , me to refuse you anything, for you have then continued his narrative: been of use to the force once or twice "I was shown by this woman into a hear and recognize the absolute truth." Lestrade looked at his watch. "I'll

"I must explain first," said McFarlane, time." "that I knew nothing of Mr. Jonas "Was the blind down?" asked convincing motive for the crime, and al- for many years ago my parents were Later.-It is rumored as we go to press apart. I was very much surprised, that John Hector McFarlane has actually therefore, when yesterday about 3 been arrested on the charge of the murder o'clock in the afternoon he walked into swing open the window. I could not my office in the city. But I was still find my stick, and he said, 'Never mind, floor) were found to be open, that there " "Here is my will," said he. 'I want was so late that I could not get back rifled and his dead body dragged across left all his property to me. He was a whose eyebrows had gone up once or Copyright by Collier's Weekly.

center. Petty thefts, wanton assaults, ance of a Well Known Builder. Sus-conduct of the criminal investigation has at him I found his keen gray eyes purposeless outrage-to the man who picion of Murder and Arson. A Clew been left in the experienced hands of In- fixed upon me with an amused expres- Holmes. senses as I read the terms of the will, but he explained that he was a bachelor with hardly any living relation. that he had known my parents in his youth and that he had always heard entific expert would pronounce at once of me as a very deserving young man and was assured that his money would be in worthy hands. Of course I could diate vicinity of a great city could only stammer out my thanks.

have explained, are the rough draft. Mr. once between Norwood and London Jonas Oldacre then informed me that bridge." there were a number of documentsbuilding leases, title deeds, mortgages, scrip, and so forth-which it was necknew nothing of this affair until I was stand. He said that his mind would bear on the case?" was a distant relation of Holmes and From the pocket of his light summer have just heard. I at once saw the hor- settled, and he begged me to come out man's story to the extent that the will mark. rible danger of my position, and I hur- to his house at Norwood that night, was drawn up by Jonas Oldacre in his "I don't mean to deny that the eviried to put the case into your hands. I bringing the will with me, and to ar- journey yesterday. It is curious, is it dence is in some ways very strongly in | "Neither my son nor I want anythem.' He was very insistent upon It was a clang of the bell, followed this point and made me promise it

"You can imagine, Mr. Holmes, that appeared in the doorway. Over his I was not in a humor to refuse him Late last night or early this morning an shoulder I caught a glimpse of one or anything that he might ask. He was my benefactor, and all my desire was to carry out his wishes in every particular. I sent a telegram home, there-Our unfortunate client rose, with a fore, to say that I had important business on hand and that it was impossi-"I arrest you for the willful murder of | ble for me to say how late I might be. Mr. Jonas Oldacre of Lower Norwood." Mr. Oldacre had told me that he would McFarlane turned to us with a ges- like me to have supper with him at 9, ture of despair and sank into his chair as he might not be home before that hour. I had some difficulty in finding "One moment, Lestrade," said his house, however, and it was nearly still exists, however, at the back of the Holmes. "Half an hour more or less half past before I reached it. I found gentleman was about to give us an ac- "One moment," said Holmes. "Who

"A middle aged woman, who was, I "I think there will be no difficulty in suppose, his housekeeper." "And it was she, I presume, who

"Exactly," said McFarlane. "Pray proceed."

McFarlane wiped his damp brow and in the past, and we owe you a good sitting room, where a frugal supper that a number of important papers were turn at Scotland Yard," said Lestrade. was laid out. Afterward Mr. Jonas scattered about the room and finally that "At the same time I must remain with Oldacre led me into his bedroom, in my prisoner, and I am bound to warn which there stood a heavy safe. This him that anything he may say will ap- he opened and took out a mass of documents, which we went over together. "I wish nothing better," said our It was between 11 and 12 when we Oldscre had received a late visitor in his client. "All I ask is that you should finished. He remarked that we must not disturb the housekeeper. He showed me out through his own French window, which had been open all this

"I will not be sure, but I believe that acquainted with him, but they drifted it was only half down. Yes, I remember how he pulled it up in order to made up in packets upon the table. It more until I read of this horrible af-

"Anything more that you would like heath."

with you presently, Mr. Sherlock criminal? Confess, Lestrade, that all wrong. All my instincts are one way, Holmes," said he. "Now, Mr. McFar- this is very unlikely." lane, two of my constables are at the conducted him to the cab, but Lestrade | the room. Give me another theory that | "Yes, Watson, I went there, and I remained.

Holmes had picked up the pages will and was looking at them with the ample, is a very possible and even away in search of his son. The mother keenest interest upon his face.

said be, pushing them over.

puzzled expression. and one or two at the end. Those are parts after burning the body." as clear as print," said he, "but the writing in between is very bad, and body?" there are three places where I cannot read it at all."

"What do you make of that?" said

"That it was written in a train. The good writing represents stations, the bad writing movement, and the very bad writing passing over points. A scithat this was drawn up on a suburban line, since nowhere save in the immethere be so quick a succession of points. "The will was duly fint hed, signed Granting that his whole journey was and witnessed by my clerk. This is it occupied in drawing up the will, then on the blue paper, and these slips, as I | the train was an express, only stopping

> Lestrade began to laugh. "You are too many for me when you begin to get on your theories, Mr. essary that I should see and under- Holmes," said he. "How does this effective he might do it so."

strade.

"Oh, you think so?" "Don't you?"

"Well, it is quite possible, but the case is not clear to me yet." what could be clear? Here is a young | Blackheath." man who learns suddenly that if a cer-

"You mean to Norwood," said Les- would you choose the very right after not been fulfilled. For an hour he "Oh, yes; no doubt that is what I crime? Would it not seem dangerous ing to soothe his own ruffled spirits. At must have meant," said Holmes, with to you to make so very close a relation last he flung down the instrument and his enigmatical smile. Lestrade had between the two incidents? Again, plunged into a detailed account of his learned by more experiences than he would you choose an occasion when misadventures, would care to acknowledge that that you are known to be in the house, "It's all going wrong, Watson-all as razorlike brain could cut through that when a servant has let you in? And, wrong as it can go. I ke a bold face door, and there is a four wheeler wait- know as well as I do that a criminal yet attained that pitch of intelligence ing," The wretched young man arose is often flurried and does such things, when they will give the preference to and with a last beseeching glance at us which a cool man would avoid. He my theories over Lestrade's facts." walked from the room. The officers was very likely afraid to go back to Did you go to Blackbeath?"

would fit the facts."

which formed the rough draft of the dozen," said Holmes. "Here, for ex- erable blackguard. The father was probable one. I make you a free pres- was at home-a little, fluffy, blue eyed "There are some points about that ent of it. The older man is showing person, in a tremor of fear and indigdocument, Lestrade, are there not?" documents which are of evident value. nation. Of course she would not admit A passing tramp sees them through the even the possibility of his guilt. But The official looked at them with a window, the blind of which is only half she would not express either surprise down. Exit the solicitor. Enter the or regret over the fate of Oldacre. On "I can read the first few lines and tramp. He seizes a stick, which he the contrary, she spoke of him with these in the middle of the second page observes there, kills Oldacre and de- such bitterness that she was uncon-

McFarlane?"

"To hide some evidence." that any murder at all had been com-

"And why did the tramp take noth-"Because they were papers that he could not negotiate." Lestrade shook his head, though it seemed to me that his manner was less absolutely assured than before. "Well, Mr. Sherlock Holmes, you may look for your tramp, and while you are finding him we will hold on to his brutal cruelly that I would have our man. The future will show which is right. Just notice this point, Mr. Holmes-that so far as we know none of the papers were removed and that shamefully defaced and matinated with the prisoner is the one man in the a knife. "That is my own photograph," world who had no reason for removing she said. 'He sent it to me in that them, since he was help at law and would come into them in any case."

My friend seemed struck by this re-

you are getting on."

"Well, he drew up his own death When the detective departed my "Well, I tried one or two leads, but warrant at the same time." said Le- friend rose and made his preparations | could get at nothing which would help fore him.

"My first movement, Watson," said | wood.

"And why not Norwood?"

"Yes, I am all that, Mr. Holmes, and so as to hide all traces of the crime. The white crelashes, and when I looked up

"Not until I have been to Black. you could for one moment put your- gard and anxious face that the high self in the place of this young man hopes with which he had started had the will had been made to commit your droned away upon his violin, endeavor-which was impenetrable to him. I saw finally, would you take the great pains before Lestrade, but, upon my soul, I him look curiously at my companion. to conceal the body and yet leave your believe that for once the fellow is on "I think I should like to have a word own stick as a sign that you were the the right track and we are on the and all the facts are the other, and I "As to the stick, Mr. Holmes, you much fear that British juries have not found very quickly that the late la-"I could very easily give you haif a mented Oldacre was a pretty considsciously considerably strengthening the "Why should the tramp burn the case of the police, tor, of course, if her son had heard her speak of the man in For the matter of that, why should this fashion it would predispose him toward hatred and violence. 'He was more like a malignant and cunning ape "Possibly the tramp wanted to hide than a human being,' said she, 'and he always was, ever since he was a young

> "'You knew him at that time?' said I. "'Yes, I knew him well; in fact, he was an old sultor of mine. Thank heaven that I had the sense to turn away from him and to marry a better, if poorer, man. I was engaged to him, Mr. Hoimes, when I heard a shocking story of how he had turned a cat loose in an aviary, and I was so horrified at nothing more to do with him.' She rummaged in a bureau, and presently she produced a photograph of a woman state, with his curse, upon my wedding

"'Well,' said I, 'at least he has forgiven you now, since he has left all his property to your son.'

have no doubt that I should have been range matters. Remember, my boy, not, that a man should draw up so im- favor of your theory," said he. "I only thing from Jonas Oldacre, dead or arrested either at my city office or at not one word to your parents about pertant a document in so haphazard a wish to point out that there are other alive" she cried, with a proper spirit. for I find on looking over my notes that said Holmes. "Watson, would you my home. A man followed me from the affair until everything is settled. There is a God in heaven, Mr. Holmes, the bindness to take the bare the bindness to take the property of the bare the bare the bare to take the property of the bindness to take the bare the bare to take the bare the bare to take the ba this period includes the case of the have the kindness to take the paper | London Bridge station, and I have no | We will keep it as a little surprise for | think it was going to be of much practure of the paper | London Bridge station, and I have no | We will keep it as a little surprise for | think it was going to be of much practure. If a man draw up a dare say that in the course of the day | that wicked man will show in his own tical importance. If a man drew up a dare say that in the course of the day that wicked man will show in his own will which he did not intend ever to-be I shall drop in at Norwood and see how good time that my son's hands are guiltless of his blood.'

> for the day's work with the alert air our hypothesis and several points of a man who has a congenial task be- which would make against it. I gave it up at last, and off I went to Nor-he as he bustled into his frock cost, "This place, Deep Dene House, is a "Not clear? Well, if that isn't clear | "must, as I said, be in the direction of | big modern villa of staring brick standing back in its own grounds, with a laurel clumped lawn in front of it. To tain older man dies he will succeed to | "Because we have in this case one | the right and some distance back from a fortune. What does he do? He says singular incident coming close to the the road was the timber yard which nothing to any one, but he arranges heels of another singular incident. The had been the scene of the fire. Here's that he shall go out on some pretext police are making the mistake of con- a rough plan on a leaf of my notebook. to see his client that night. He waits centrating their attention upon the This window on the left is the one until the only other person in the house second because it happens to be the which opens into Oldacre's room. You is in bed, and then in the solitude of one which is actually criminal. But can look into it from the road, you see. the man's room he murders him, burns it is evident to me that the logical That is about the only bit of consolahis body in the wood pile and departs | way to approach the case is upon tion I have had today. Lestrade was to a neighboring hotel. The blood the first incident—the curious will, so not there, but his head constable did stains in the room and also on the suddenly made and to so unexpect- the honors. They had just found a stick are very slight. It is probable ed an heir. It may do something to great treasure trove. They had spent that he imagined his crime to be a simplify what followed. No, my dear the morning raking among the ashes bloodless one and hoped that if the fellow, I don't think you can help me. of the burned wood pile, and besides body were consumed it would hide all | There is no prospect of danger, or I | the charred organic remains they had traces of the method of his death, should not dream of stirring out with- secured several discolored metal disks. traces which for some reason must out you. I trust that when I see you I examined them with care, and there have pointed to him. Is not all this in the evening I will be able to report was no doubt that they were trouser that I have been able to do something buttons. I even distinguished that one "It strikes me, my good Lestrade, as for this unfortunate youngster who has of them was marked with the name of being just a trifle too obvious," said thrown himself upon my protection." Hyams, who was Oklacre's taflor. I Holmes. "You do not add imagination It was late when my friend returned, then worked the lawn very carefully has made everything as hard as iron. Nothing was to be seen save that some body or bundle had been dragged through a low privet hedge which is in a line with the wood pile. All that, of course, fits in with the official theory. I crawled about the lawn with an August sun on my back, but I got up at the end of an hour no wiser than

"Well, after this flasco I went into the bedroom and examined that also. The blood stains were very slight, mere smears and discolorations, but undoubtedly fresh. The stick had been removed, but there also the marks were slight. There is no doubt about the stick belonging to our client. He admits it. Footmarks of both men could be made out on the carpet, but none of any third person, which again is a trick for the other side. They were piling up their score all the time, and we were at a standstill.

"Only one little gleam of hope did I get, and yet it amounted to nothing.

(Continued on Eleventh Page.)